ENSURING CHILD PROTECTION ACROSS BORDERS

Child protection transcends national borders and lies at the heart of contemporary societal concerns. In France, Italy, Scotland, and Quebec, the care of vulnerable children is a major issue. While these countries face common challenges in child protection, each, shaped by its history, culture, and values, has developed distinct models to address the needs of young people and support families in difficult situations

How have France, Italy, Scotland, and Quebec, all signatories to the 1989 International Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC), structured the governance and financing of public policy for protected children? What role do they give to foster care and institutional care?

How does juvenile criminal justice function there? How do they accommodate unaccompanied minors? What are the successes of these different models and the persistent challenges, and from which practices could France draw inspiration to address current issues in child protection?

By comparing national approaches, we will seek to extract valuable lessons and stimulate reflection on potential improvements to our child protection policies. Furthermore, the aim of the symposium is to bring together complementary views on child protection: the institutional view, the view of professionals working in the field and the view of those directly concerned.

These are the questions that will be addressed at this symposium, which will take place on December 3rd and 4th, in Paris.

Educational objectives of the symposium :

- Learn about the governance and financing of child protection in France, Italy, Scotland and Quebec.
- Discover the practices of child protection professionals, and their limitations, in these 4 countries
- Identify and compare the place of children in the definition and implementation of child protection policies in these 4 countries.
- What practices could France draw on to meet current child protection challenges?

Child Protection in Action

14:00 Voices from Child Protection Professionals

From the point of view of professionals in the field, are these institutional systems easy to understand? What do they think works well in child protection, what are the current best practices and what are the main limitations?

- Quebec – Robert Levasseur and child protection professionals on a video clip
- Italy – Maria Teresa Paladino, public body, Emilia Romagna Region or Marianna Giordano, President of CISMAI
- Scotland – Alison Penman, Senior Service Manager, Children and Families Services
- France – Emmanuel Panis, General Director of the ARASS Association

15:30 Voices from Children and Parents

In the countries represented at this symposium, the voices of the children primarily concerned have, over the years, become increasingly recognized as essential for understanding and driving positive change in child protection policies. But how successful have these efforts truly been?

- Quebec – Carl Lacharité and children and parents on a video clip
- Italy – Federico Zullo & Carol Roncali, Agevolando, italian care leavers association & Parents from PIPPI Programme, Tuscany
- Scotland – Lynsey Carey, Who Cares ? Scotland

THEME OF THE DAY : A FOCUS ON SPECIFIC ASPECTS OF CHILD PROTECTION

Morning Session Focus on Italy and Scotland

10:00 A Child Protection System Balanced Between Children's Rights and Parental Support (Italy)

The response of parents to children's needs as a collective challenge that calls for participation and engagement on the part of both families and the service system. The Italian experience of implementing "Programma di Intervento Per la Prevenzione dell'istituzionalizzazione" (P.I.P.P.I.) : from a program to a public policy aiming to make the right to parenting support enforceable.

- Paola Milani, Ph.D., University Professor of Social Pedagogy and Family Pedagogy, University of Padua, Italy
- Marco Lus, Lecturer, University of Trieste, Italy
- Short video to hear the voice of the families
- Reactions/questions from international speakers and the audience

11:00 Interdisciplinary Approaches in Child Protection (Scotland)

Few words about the focus discussed

- Alison Penman, Senior Service Manager, Children and Families Services
- Reactions/questions from international speakers and the audience

14:00 Community Approaches in Quebec

A strong community has been shown to be a major factor in preventing child maltreatment and protecting children. In Québec, there is a network of more than 300 grassroots community family centers offering multiple forms of non-professional support to parents and children based on their needs. Most of them are working with families involved with the child protection system. This sequence will focus on the perspective of the workers in these centers, in particular on their practices in supporting families and collaborating with child protection professionals.

- Carl Lacharité and community workers on a video clip
- Reactions/questions from international speakers and the audience

15:00 How to care for minors with complex life trajectories (juvenile justice, unaccompanied minors, mental health issues) ?

Children and young people supported by child welfare services often face a wide range of vulnerabilities that can significantly influence their life trajectories and complicate the effectiveness of the support they receive. This panel seeks to explore some of the key factors contributing to this complexity, including experiences of migration and exile, involvement with the justice system, and challenges related to disability or mental health.

- Adélaïde Vervaecke, Clinical Psychologist
- Guillaume Teillet, Associate Professor at the University of Poitiers, GRESCO laboratory
- Mathias Millet, Professor of Sociology at the University of Poitiers, GRESCO laboratory
- Guillaume Bronsard, Professor of Child Psychiatry at the Faculty of Medicine in Brest and Head of Department at the University Hospital of Brest
